PIRKEI AVOS OF THE WEEK

An Outline of the Rebbe's Explanation of Pirkei Avos Chapter IV

Chapter IV

פרק ד', משנה ה': ... רבי צדוק אומר: ... ואל תעשה עטרה להתגדל בה, ולא קרדום לחתוך בה; וכך היה הלל אומר: ודאשתמש בתגא, חלף. הא למדת, כל הנהנה מדברי תורה, נוטל חייו מן העולם.

Chapter 4, Mishnah 5: Rabbi Tzaddok would (often) say, '... Do not make the Torah a crown to make oneself great with or a spade to dig.' So would Hillel say, 'One who makes personal use of the crown of Torah shall perish.' Hence, one who benefits from the Torah's words removes his life from the world.

The Simple Explanation

The Bartenura explains this Mishnah as follows¹. "Making Torah a crown" refers to learning to be called a great rabbi or to sit in a place of honor. Instead, one must study the Torah out of love of G-d. Honor must not be the motivation for Torah study. Furthermore, do not make the Torah "a spade with which to dig." Do not learn Torah to "have a trade." Torah study is not a course one takes to receive a diploma. One should not learn Torah to become a Rosh Yeshivah, a Torah teacher, or a rabbi. The Bartenura cites the Talmud as proof of this prohibition². The Talmud quotes Moshe's words to the Jewish nation³, "Hashem commanded me at that time to teach you statutes and ordinances" The Talmud says that just as Moshe taught us without charge, we must also teach without receiving compensation.

However, he questions this. Why is it permissible for a teacher in a Torah school to receive a salary? He explains that one receives payment for taking care of the children. Likewise, why is it permissible to pay a rabbi to render Halachic decisions? The explanation is that he is being paid for his time. He could have used that time to earn a living by performing a trade. He is being paid for the income which he could otherwise have made.

The Rambam takes a somewhat different approach⁴. He explains the strict prohibition of earning a livelihood from the Torah⁵. Likewise, he complains about those who constantly study the Torah and rely upon the community for sustenance. He writes similar things in the Mishnah Torah⁶.

There are latter-day codifiers who disagree with the Rambam⁷. They cite various proofs to demonstrate that one may derive sustenance from the Torah.

The Alter Rebbe's Position

The Alter Rebbe decides the law as follows⁸. One is only cautioned not to make the Torah a "spade with which to dig" at the beginning of his studies. One may not commence learning the Torah to use it to "make a living." However, this does not apply to one who began Torah study for proper motives, i.e., the love of G-d. However, if he realizes he cannot support himself later, he may sustain himself through the Torah. After all, if he lacks essential things, he cannot continue his studies. The Alter Rebbe's words can be explained in two different manners:

1. One may support himself from Torah study; otherwise, he will be busy looking to study a trade. As a result of this, he will neglect Torah study. In other words, supporting himself with Torah study allows him to study Torah.
2. There is a difference between before and after the fact. One may not begin learning to sustain himself. However, provided that he started acceptably, there is no problem.

An example of this would be one who began studying as a child. His parents supported him; hence, this was no concern. He has no other option once he is grown up and needs to support himself. Therefore, he may support himself through his Torah study.

This concept is similar to another law regarding Shabbos⁹. One is not permitted to embark on a ship immediately before Shabbos since it could lead to the desecration of the Shabbos. However, if he left earlier when it was permissible¹⁰, he may continue traveling on Shabbos. So, too, if he began Torah study at an allowable time, there would be no difficulty.

5. Please note that the Rambam supported himself from the practice of medicine.

Another Application

This will also help us understand a different Mishnah¹¹. "Rabbi Nehorai says I would set aside all of the trades in the world and only teach my son Torah." We need to understand how he could say such a thing. The Sages have taught us that¹² "one is obligated to teach his son a trade!"

Based on the above, we can understand this. When his son begins learning, he is a child and does not need to support himself. Once he grows up, he can support himself with the Torah he studied.

It is irrelevant that his father knows that he will ultimately need to use the Torah he studied as a child. This is the same as boarding a ship three days before Shabbos and knowing that he will be aboard the vessel on Shabbos does not prevent him from boarding it then.
