Rashi in His Own Words

במדבר ו', כ"ד: יְבָרְכֶךָ יְהוָה וַיִּשְׁמְרֶךָ:

רש"י ד"ה יברכך: שיתברכו נכסיד:

ישמרך: שלא יבואו עליך שודדים ליטול ממונך, שהנותן מתנה לעבדו אינו יכול לשמרו מכל אדם, וכיון שבאים לסטים עליו ונוטלין אותה ממנו, מה הנאה יש לו במתנה זו, אבל הקב"ה הוא הנותן הוא השומר. והרבה מדרשים דרשו בו בספרי:

Bamidbar 6:24: May Hashem bless you and watch over you.

Rashi Heading: May (He) bless you: that your possessions shall be blessed. And watch over you: that no thieves shall attack you and steal your money. When one gives his servant a gift, he cannot protect it from anyone else. If robbers come and take it from him, what benefit does he have from this gift? As for the Holy One blessed be He; however, He is the One who both gives and protects. There are many Midrashic interpretations of this verse in the Sifri.

Synopsis

This week we read the Torah portion of Naso. Hashem gives a special command to the Kohanim, the descendants of Aharon, to bless the Jewish people with a three-fold blessing. The first blessing is "May Hashem bless you and watch over you." Rashi cites the words "may (He) bless you." He explains that this means "that your possessions shall be blessed." He then quotes the words "and watch over you." He explains this at great length with an allegory. He explains that when one gives his servant a present, he cannot protect it. However, Hashem is both the One who gives and protects. Rashi concludes by saying that "there are many Midrashic interpretations of this in the Sifri." The implication is that this contrasts with his explanation, which is Peshat.

We understand that even according to Peshat, the priestly blessing is a unique, general blessing. Why would Rashi explain that it merely blesses one's property and not oneself? Furthermore, the very first explanation the Sifri offers for "may Hashem bless you" is quite different from that which Rashi uses. The Sifri explains that He may bless you with a known blessing written in the Torah. This blessing includes not only one's property but also his health, his children, and his spiritual needs. Why does Rashi ignore this all-encompassing blessing which is explicit in the Torah? This certainly would seem much more likely to be Peshat!

THE RASHI OF THE WEEK

Additionally, before the priestly blessing, all possible blessings were listed in the Torah portion of Bechukosai¹. These are the blessings that G-d promises us for keeping Torah and Mitzvos. Even in our Parshah, we find that one would receive great wealth as a reward for giving the Kohanim the presents which are due to them².

That is the answer to our question. According to Peshat, Rashi cannot say that these blessings include life, health, property, money, children, etc. These are all contained within other Berochos that the Torah already promised. Therefore, Rashi says that "your possessions shall be blessed." The blessing is in quality as opposed to quantity. That property you already own will increase, and it will grow and improve more than that which could be naturally expected.

Rashi's Explanation

In this week's Torah portion, Naso, we find that the Kohanim are commanded to bless the Jewish people. The blessing is given with the specific text of a three-part blessing, as specified by the Torah. The fact that Kohanim must bless all Jews with this text throughout all generations tells us how broad a range of meaning is contained in this Berochoh.

The first part of this blessing is³ "May Hashem bless you and watch over you." Rashi cites the words "may (He) bless you." He explains these words by saying, "Your possessions shall be blessed." Rashi then cites the words "and watch over you." He explains this by writing "that no thieves shall attack you and steal your money." He continues with a lengthy allegory. "For when one gives his servant a gift, he cannot protect it from anyone else. If robbers come and take it from him, what benefit does he have from this gift? As for the Holy One blessed be He, however, He is the One who both gives and protects." Rashi concludes his comments by saying that "there are many Midrashic interpretations of this verse in the Sifri."

Difficulties in Understanding Rashi

The blessing with which G-d commanded the Kohanim to bless the Jewish people must indeed be unique. This priestly blessing is very general and should touch on all aspects of a Jew's life. This being the case, we need to understand how Rashi can explain that this special blessing applies only to our possessions!

Furthermore, let us look at the first interpretation that the Sifri offers for the words "may Hashem bless you." It writes that this refers to a Berochoh explicitly stated elsewhere in the Torah. The Torah tells us that⁴ "You shall be blessed in the city, and you shall be blessed in the field. Blessed will be the fruit of your womb, the fruit of your soil, your livestock, the offspring of your cattle, and your sheep's flocks. Blessed will be your basket and your kneading bowl. You shall be blessed when you come, and you shall be blessed when you depart."

Furthermore, it is written that⁵ "And all these blessings will come upon you and cleave to you, (only) if you obey the Lord your G-d." The priestly blessing does not merely refer to property, and it applies equally to one's body, children, and health. As we see in the continuation of the verses, it even applies to spiritual matters. As it says⁶, "The Lord will establish you as His holy people as He swore to you if you observe the commandments of the Lord your G-d, and walk in His ways."

Why does Rashi ignore this explanation, which seems to fit with Peshat, explaining that it refers only to property? Moreover, Rashi's source for this blessing is the Sifri. However, the Sifri writes that "He will bless you with property – יברכך בנכסים." Why does Rashi change that to "your property shall be blessed – שיתברכו נכסיד." Note that Rashi does not just change the wording; the change also affects the meaning.

We also find something difficult to understand about Rashi's explanation of the words "and watch over you." The simple meaning would seem to be that Hashem will guard the individual. However, according to Rashi's explanation G-d is promising to watch over that with which He blessed the individual.

The Explanation

We have learned earlier of the blessings we will receive for fulfilling Torah and Mitzvos¹. When we read of the priestly blessings, we immediately have a question. What new is being added here? The priestly blessings must contain something over and above those blessings which we were promised earlier.

The blessings we spoke about earlier serve as a reward for performing Hashem's Will. Perhaps we can say that the priestly blessings are more significant. They apply even to one who has not done what G-d wanted. Even such a person will receive these blessings. However, that is untenable. We must say that there is also an advantage in the blessings for one who does fulfill G-d's Will. What do these blessings add to the blessings which the Torah promised us earlier?

This is why Rashi did not explain the words "may He bless you," according to the first explanation in the Sifri. Those blessings are stated explicitly in the Torah. They include everything; they apply equally to one's body, children, health, spiritual and physical needs. However, all of those blessings are included in those we were already told are a reward. What does the priestly blessing add?

THE RASHI OF THE WEEK

Rashi explains that the priestly blessing adds a qualitative difference, not merely a difference in quantity. That is the difference between "being blessed with property" and "your property being blessed." The meaning here is that a special blessing will rest on whatever property and possessions one has, and everything will increase supernaturally.

This is similar to that which happened with our forefather Yitzchok. His crops were blessed in a manner that⁷ "Yitzchok planted in that land, and he found in that year that Hashem blessed him a hundred-fold." As Rashi explains there⁸, "although the land was not as abundant as it should have been⁹... and the year was not as abundant as it should have been¹⁰... for each measure they estimated that it could produce, it produced one hundred."

We see that Rashi writes "your possessions" rather than "your money." That is because "possessions" includes everything one owns without exception, and this special Berochoh rested within everything.

We still need to understand why Rashi explains the words "watch over you" in a manner that deviates from the simple explanation. We just used an example from our forefather Yaakov. To cite another example, Hashem told Yaakov¹¹, "And behold, I am with you, and I will guard you wherever you go..." G-d promised Yaakov simply that He would protect him. However, Rashi explains that Hashem will guard with which we were blessed. Why does Rashi deviate from Peshat?

The explanation is that had the blessing of Hashem "watching over" us meant guarding our persons, it obviously should have preceded the blessing of Hashem "blessing us." Since Rashi explains that "blessing us" refers to our possessions, protecting our bodies must come before blessing our property. Once Rashi tells us that the first Berochoh, "blessing us," refers to property, "watching over" us must also refer to property.

Rashi's explanation of "watch over you" directly continues his explanation of "bless you." The blessing that Rashi discusses is superior to all other blessings written in the Torah. It does not come as a reward for one's actions. Instead, these blessings come to each Jew regardless of his performance of Torah and Mitzvos. Whatever he owns is blessed; it produces far more than what would be naturally expected. This could easily arouse the jealousy of those around us. Therefore, in addition to blessing us, G-d watches over us and assures us that no thieves will be able to take our blessed possessions.

That is the reason for Rashi's lengthy explanation. He describes in detail one who "gives his servant a gift." He explains that "he cannot protect the gift from anyone else. If robbers come and take it from him, what benefit does he have from it?" People will be jealous of the incredible gift which we receive from Hashem. Therefore, His gift includes His great protection. Only the Holy One blessed be He both gives and protects.

However, we cannot say that this Berochoh is limited to simply guarding our property. Therefore Rashi concludes by saying that "there are many Midrashic interpretations of this verse in the Sifri."

A Deeper Lesson from Rashi

The priestly blessings apply in all times and places¹². In other words, even outside of Israel during the time of exile, it is a positive commandment for Kohanim to bless the Jewish people. These blessings help every Jew, whatever his spiritual circumstances may be.

These blessings are so unique, as explained in works of Chassidic philosophy¹³. It is because they come from an unusually lofty spiritual level. Concerning this level of spirituality, the observance of a Jew is irrelevant. All that matters is the inherent connection between the essence of the soul and G-d. Therefore, the blessings transcend nature entirely, reaching each Jew at every time and place.
