Publisher’s Foreword

By now, surely everyone is familiar with the Rebbe’s exhortation, “Do all you can to bring Moshiach.” An important part of our effort must be to learn the sichos of the Rebbe. On Shabbos Lech Lecha, 11 MarCheshvan 5752, the Rebbe said that in our generation, the last generation of exile and the first generation of Redemption, there should be “an increase in Torah study . . . . This needs to be not only with the three intellectual faculties as they are connected to the emotional traits, but also in the essence of the three intellectual faculties. This means specifically an increase in the study of the inner teachings of the Torah (with intellectual explanations), including the subject of Redemption and our righteous Moshiach.”

To facilitate fulfillment of the Rebbe’s directive, we are pleased to publish Reflections of Redemption. It is hoped that these short essays, based on the Rebbe’s sichos, will help “open our eyes” to the presence of Moshiach and the immanence of Redemption.

A word about the sichos themselves is in order. Obviously, even the simplest sicha has many nuances and offers insights from many angles. The multi-dimensional nature of the sichos reflects the multi-dimensional nature of Chassidus. As explained in On the Essence of Chassidus, Chassidus penetrates all areas of Torah, revealing their underlying unity; yet it also exists at a level higher than the process of interpretation. Chassidus is not just a fifth level of interpretation, a rung higher than pshat, remez, drush and sod. Chassidus is categorically different. It can show how an apparently isolated interpretation or discussion actually has a fundamental connection with a central concept. In many ways, the sichos are the paradigm of how Chassidus works.

It is well known that the Alter Rebbe's famous dictum to "live with the times" means to live with the weekly Torah reading. Every detail of a particular Torah reading contains and reveals a timeless truth. A deep study and clear understanding of the Torah portion illuminates the fundamental principle, the relevant lesson that should permeate and guide our actions for that week. The theme of our times – and thus the underlying theme of every Torah portion – is the Rebbe's prophecy that Moshiach is coming now. Thus, we would expect the sichos to demonstrate not only the inner unity between various approaches and levels of interpretation; we would expect them to reveal the element of Moshiach within each Torah reading as well. The purpose of this book, then, is to present an aspect of the element of Moshiach in the weekly Torah reading, as revealed in the Rebbe's sichos.

Some of the essays follow the structure of the sicha itself; others use an incident or insight as a starting point to discuss in a more generalized way central concepts connected to Moshiach, such as exile, Redemption, the role of the non-Jew, etc. Some essays are extended analogies, emphasizing a point of comparison between events in the times of Moses and those of our own day, the times of Moshiach. In other essays, an idea's relevance to Redemption might emerge only after a detailed examination of the pshat, or literal meaning, of a particular verse. But throughout, what emerges is Torah's revelation of Moshiach in our times.

Hopefully, the brevity and style make these essays, each of which focuses on one aspect of the Torah reading, accessible to the average reader. For this reason, there is also an introductory summary to each essay. The informality of the format explains the absence of footnotes and other critical apparatus. The citations for references and quotations may be found in the original sichos.

It is customary to acknowledge those people who work 'behind-the-scenes,' so to speak. The initiative for this project came from Rabbi Mendy Chanin, who also took responsibility for guiding this book to publication. The manuscript was reviewed and edited by Rabbi Heschel Greenberg; his scholarship and clarity of thought materially improved every essay. Their efforts, without which this book could not have been published, are much appreciated. Of course, any errors or oversights remain the responsibility of the author.

The essays presented here are but part of the Moshiach Awareness Campaign, which is carrying out the Rebbe's directive to prepare the world for Moshiach. It is our hope that this book will contribute to that preparation. May we soon see, in the most literal sense, the fulfillment of the Rebbe's prophecy of "immediate Redemption" and "Behold he (Moshiach) comes."

CREATION, TESHUVAH, TIKUN AND MOSHIACH

Tikun – Perfection – is both an accomplished state and an ongoing process. What is complete within the six days of creation still needs correction from the perspective of Shabbos. Teshuvah is the process of correction. When teshuvah is complete, we reach the time that is “all Shabbos,” the times of Moshiach.

Creation, Teshuvah, Tikun and Moshiach – what connects these is a dynamic of completion and elevation. In regard to Creation, the Torah states: “And G-d blessed the Seventh Day and made it holy, for on it He rested from all His work which G-d created to function.” What does this mean, “G-d created to function,” or, more literally, “which G-d created to make”? Why doesn’t it simply say “which G-d created”? The phrase “to function” or “to make” seems superfluous. Noticing this grammatical anomaly, the rabbis commented that the Torah is telling us that Creation itself needs to be developed and corrected. G-d created the world in such a way that, when He was finished, it still needed to be made, as it were. On the seventh day, Shabbos, the world was incomplete and imperfect; it required Tikun, meaning improvement, regulation, reformation. (Indeed, the concept of Tikun Olam – perfecting the world – underlies a range of Jewish activity, in areas as diverse as mysticism and social action.) With the addition of one word in Hebrew, seemingly irrelevant, the Torah reveals a basic fact about Creation – its imperfection – and the imperative that imposes on mankind in general, and the Jewish people in particular, to improve the world, bring it to completion.

On the other hand, in another passage the rabbis also declared that the world was created in its fullness, meaning that nothing was missing. The world was created with everything it needs, lacking nothing, requiring no correction. Everything is in place; no improvement is necessary.

So which is it? Was the world created “to be made” – in need of Tikun, requiring improvement – or was it created complete, in all its fullness? The answer is both. Creation requires both Tikun – improvement – and is also perfect. Both observations of the rabbis are correct. There is neither contradiction nor paradox. Rather, each observation refers to a different part – or stage – of creation. For, as is well known, the world was created in six days. On the seventh day of Creation, Shabbos, G-d rested. So, there is a making of the world in six days, and a resting from – a finishing and completion of Creation on the seventh day.

Thus, during the six days of Creation, the world was formed in all its fullness, complete. It is to this stage of Creation that the rabbis refer when they say the world was made perfect, requiring no improvement, missing nothing. However, the very nature of Shabbos, the very holiness of the day, the fact that G-d blessed it, must lead to a “making,” a development, correction, elevation and improvement of the world.

That is, from the perspective of the six days of creation, everything is complete. From the perspective of Shabbos, the world needs improvement, because Shabbos is a higher level than the six days. At the level of Shabbos, a day sanctified with holiness, the six days of the mundane are indeed missing something. The world of the normal and everyday requires Tikun.

This parallels what the Alter Rebbe says in Tanya in regard to teshuvah, repentance: “The essence of repentance is in the heart, and in the heart are found many distinctions and gradations.” Therefore, even if one has done teshuvah correctly, even if the repentance is complete, once one reaches a higher level, ascends in spirituality, the teshuvah must also be elevated. In simple terms, the more refined, the more spiritually purified we become, the more sensitive we are to the smallest defect in our thoughts, speech or action. This requires a greater degree of teshuvah. For example, a stain on a common garment is not cause for great concern; the garment is still completely functional. But the same stain on a silken garment would ruin it.

So, when the Sages say that one should spend all his days in teshuvah, they obviously don't mean that the sins and transgressions have not been washed away and removed by the "first level" of teshuvah. Assuming the teshuvah is done properly and sincerely, of course the teshuvah was perfect and complete (just as the works of creation were perfect and complete on the sixth day). Nevertheless, there are many levels of teshuvah, and having refined and elevated one's self, one must also rise to the next level of teshuvah. (The sanctity and holiness reached on one Shabbos carries us through the coming week, but on the next Shabbos – we must reach even higher.)

We can understand this from the simple example of tzedakah. As one's wealth grows, so too does the amount one is obligated to give to tzedakah. For an individual less well off, if he gives an amount appropriate to his status and situation, he has given tzedakah in the most perfect way possible. But once his situation and status improve, once he is on a higher material level, then what sufficed yesterday does not suffice today. He must give tzedakah not according to what he had available yesterday, but according to his means today. The same is true of teshuvah – one can repent – or more accurately, return – on a continuous spectrum of scrupulousness and self-examination, of sensitivity and spiritual refinement. In this sense, even tzaddikim can do teshuvah. It is no coincidence that in Hebrew the words “teshuvah” and “the Sabbath” have the same letters.

This brings us to Moshiach. The Previous Lubavitcher Rebbe declared, “Immediate Teshuvah, immediate Redemption.” This concept, that Moshiach and teshuvah, are connected is rooted in the Rambam, who explains that “As soon as Israel does teshuvah, they will be immediately redeemed.” Further, the era of Redemption, the days of Moshiach, are referred to as a day that will be all Shabbos. Thus we find several connections: teshuvah and Moshiach, teshuvah and Shabbos, and of course, Moshiach and Shabbos. These are all conceptually parallel. Shabbos is the seventh day, following six days of creation; the days of Moshiach will be the seventh millennium, following six millennia of teshuvah, mitzvos and acts of goodness and kindness.

Just as Shabbos represents a state of being categorically different than the preceding six days of creation, so too our spirituality, the nature of our existence, will be radically different during the days of Moshiach.

There is a practical lesson. From the perspective of the six days of creation or the first level of teshuvah, we have accomplished a lot – indeed, everything that can be asked of us. We have reached a level of perfection – a spiritual comfort zone reflected in our abundance of possessions and physical comforts. As the Rebbe has said, we have already done teshuvah.

Still, material wealth is not Shabbos. In fact, it is irrelevant on Shabbos. From the perspective of Shabbos – which is a microcosm of the days of Moshiach – creation is insufficient. True, the six days of the week, our Tikun Olam and the six millennium are all, each in its “sphere of influence,” a necessary beginning and critical part of the process. But it’s not enough. There’s perfection, and then there’s a true, complete, final and everlasting perfection.

We must go beyond the constraints and limits of perfection that we have already achieved. It is erev Shabbos, the eve of the era of Redemption. We are in transition to the time when, as the prophet says, “the earth will be filled with the knowledge of G-d as the waters cover the ocean.” Just as Shabbos infuses the six days of the week even before it comes, so that even before Shabbos arrives openly, there’s a foretaste – which grows stronger the closer we come to Shabbos – so, too, we must be infused with the spirit of Redemption, the proximity of Tikun. In the Rebbe’s words: “We must live with Moshiach.”

The Announcement Of The Redemption

In our times, miracles and wonders are happening throughout the world. These include "great wonders,"<sup>1</sup> beyond those miracles discernable to G-d "Who alone performs great wonders," but where "the beneficiary does not recognize the miracle."<sup>2</sup> Rather, the miracles we experience now include wonders obvious and revealed to all; they are thus representative of, analogous to and a prelude for the miracles and wonders of the future Redemption, which shall arrive imminently. About this imminent Redemption, it is said:<sup>3</sup> "As in the days of your departure from Egypt, I will show him wonders."

To illustrate:

a) Several major and powerful regimes are undergoing progressive, positive developments and changing for the better - in the spheres of goodness, righteousness and justice.<sup>4</sup> These transformations are representative of, analogous to and a prelude for the correction and perfection of the world in the days of Moshiach.<sup>5</sup> Further, by affecting the Jewish people, granting them freedom in all matters associated with Judaism, Torah and Mitzvot, even permitting the exodus of hundreds of thousands of Jews to freedom [from the former Soviet Union, etc.], these changes are also representative of, analogous to and a prelude for the ingathering of the exiles<sup>6</sup> which will transpire in the days of

b) The events which occurred in the Persian Gulf - are among the signs of the Redemption, based on the saying of our sages that when "nations provoke one another..."<sup>7</sup> it portends the coming of Moshiach. More specifically, our sages in the Midrash present the following scenario as an indication of the arrival of the Era of Redemption: "The king of Persia (obviously referring to the entire geographic area comprising Iraq) will provoke the Arabian king... and all the nations of the world will be in turmoil and terror... and (G-d) says to them (Israel)... "Do not fear, the time for your Redemption has arrived."<sup>8</sup> The Midrash continues and concludes: "When the King Moshiach comes, he will stand on the roof of the Beis HaMikdash [Holy Temple] and proclaim to Israel: "Humble ones, the time for your Redemption has arrived."

Ironically, in recent days the (seventy) nations of the world gathered, in a way reminiscent of "The nations are in an uproar and the peoples mutter,"<sup>9</sup> in order to accuse Israel: "You are thieves for having conquered the land of Israel," They refer not just to Gaza or Samaria, but also (and primarily) to Judea which includes Jerusalem, the capital of the Land of Israel, "The city where David encamped."<sup>10</sup> This accusation comes at a time when everyone knows the refutation, as clearly enunciated by Rashi at the very beginning of his commentary to the Torah: "All of the earth is G-d's, He is the one who created it and gave it to whomever was just in His eyes... He gave it to us."

(And, incredibly, this cacophony of nations accusing Israel includes even those who have traditionally endeavored to further the cause of righteousness and justice in the world, as seen by their reaction to the events of the Persian Gulf; there, they based their behavior on righteousness and justice, (that is, to prevent a state of theft of one individual from another, of country from country, etc.). However, in this matter, they too have conducted themselves improperly towards the Children of Israel.)

One might suggest the following explanation for this paradoxical phenomenon (that such an undesirable situation occurred in this era of open miracles):

As mentioned earlier [in the full text of the Sicha], in the Divinely ordained system for this world, concealment and darkness precede the revelation of light. Thus, we should not be dismayed by the "Nations raising an uproar and the peoples muttering," since it is - as the verse concludes - "In vain." As the Midrash comments: "All of their uproar is... in vain,"<sup>11</sup> because "the One who dwells in Heaven will laugh, G-d will mock them."<sup>12</sup> Therefore, the Jewish people stand firm in all matters relating to the integrity of the Land of Israel (particularly Jerusalem), knowing that "All of the earth is G-d's, He created it... and gave it to us."

Moreover, the phenomenon of "the nation raising an uproar and the peoples muttering" is, in and of itself, one of the signs of Redemption, as Rashi observes that: "Our sages interpreted the entire verse of the "nations raising an uproar..." as a reference to the King Moshiach."

We have already openly seen the miracles at the beginning of this year, in continuation of the miracles of last year, in connection with the fact that that country (Russia) freed and assisted thousands and thousands of Jews to go the land of Israel (and other places). In those places they can live their individual lives in full freedom. This reveals the greatness of Israel, that even the nations of the world recognize this and assist them.

The revelation in the world and recognition by the nations of the greatness of the Jewish people has increased from generation to generation. As we approach ever nearer to the final and true Redemption, the declaration that "And nations will go by your light,"<sup>1</sup> "And kings will be your midwives and their princes your nursemaids,"<sup>2</sup> comes closer to its fulfillment.

Over the course of generations - even in the time of exile - we find that the nations of the world have recognized that the Jewish people are the Chosen People. We see this in many places in the Midrashim of our Sages of blessed memory. (For example, in Zevachim,<sup>3</sup> saying to the Rabbi] "I will fulfill the Biblical prediction of: kings will be your midwives," and in other sources.)

It is also known that non-Jews call the Jewish people (even when speaking among themselves) - the "Chosen People."

In the United States and other benevolent countries, Jews are permitted to perform their Divine service with a calm mind and amidst physical comfort. Jews in the Diaspora and in Israel are commonly offered assistance.<sup>4</sup> This assistance itself has increased in recent years, specifically last year (the year of "I will show them wonders") and beginning with this year (a year with miracles within it) in relation to the permission to emigrate and the aid from that country to our fellow-Jews to go to the land of Israel.
